What the Senate May Now Do Is a Problem

As Affairs Are by No Means Clearly Understood.

Senators Give Up the Hope of a Compromise

And Others Declare That No Ground Has Been Gaired.

The Significant Statement of Senator Palmer on the Cloture Question Which Would Indicate That the President Was in Favor of the Adoption of the Hill Resolution-Senator Voorhees's Change of Front in Allowing a Recess Instead of an Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 .- Many and startling as have been the changes which have taken place in the sltuation with reference to the repeal to secure a majority of democratic senbill since that measure was introduced ators to favor compromise. One of in the senate there has never before been a day which has witnessed so many signed today, thirty-six names. as has the one which closed with Senaator Faulkner's motion for a recess at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The day started in with the announcement that the compromise was "off." Many were inclined to doubt the announcement this morning that the administration had set its seal of disapproval upon the democratic compromise, but a very little inquiry was necessary to sat- He Expires Suddenly and His Demise isfy them of the correctness of this statement. Then came the talk on the part of some senators of adjournment as the best remedy for the situation, and that was soon met with the assertion that closure would be the proper thing on the program. Speedily were these announcements followed with the | magh, primate of all Ireland, died sudrumor that the silver men were willing to surrender unconditionally and allow the repeal bill to be passed without further opposition. Lastly came the definite announcement, made almost simultaneously, that there would be no effort tomorrow at cloture and the silver men had reorganized their forces and were prepared to continue the fight indefin-

Senator Dubois's Move. The most interesting development of the day was on the silver side. Whether given out in earnest or for a purpose, some of the silver senators announced when they heard that the compromise bill would not be presented that they would make no more factious opposttion, but would give way as soon as their prepared speeches were concluded and let the repeal bill pass. Senator Dubois was instrumental in bringing about the startling change, which became apparent about 4 o'clock. He crossed over to the democratic side of the chamber and began to investigate.

He met with much encouragement. The situation was changed in ten minutes. Senator Pugh's services were soon enlisted and he went to work with a will. The result was, he said, the finding of several silver democrats who had heretofore refused to fillbuster at all, who were willing to do all in their power and to use whatever means might appear most effective to prevent the reaching of a vote upon repeal. He said there were ten or twelve democrats who would stand out to the end to prevent this result and who would resort to filibustering, pure and simple, to accomplish it if necessary. Meantime the populists, Peffer, Allen and Kyle, had gath ered about Senator Peffer's desk. An hour before Mr. Peffer had authorized the statement that the populists were willing to throw up their hands. When came out of this conference into which Dubois was invited before its close, they were all prepared to continue It is further alleged that Charles Olmthe war to the biter end.

Two Tart Interviews. When seen at 4 o'clock Senator Faulkner said: "Half an hour ago I told you a vote would be taken in a week; now it looks further off than ever." Senator Hawley was encountered hurrying to catch a trian at 5 o'clock. He was on the eve of starting to the world's

"It looks to me," he said, "as if we fair, and now it looks as it I might visit it and get back in time for the finish." Cloture is a question which senators discuss in a whisper since the hot words of last week. There can be little doubt that Senator Voorhees had in mind early in the day, when he said he would ask for adjournment instead of a recess to-night, the bringing up of the cloture resolution tomorrow. When he afterward allowed Mr. Faulkner to move a recess instead of an adjournment he cut off all possibility of taking that question up tomorrow. What he may design later in the week is not known. He may be awaiting the return of Senator Hill, who is the real author of the cloture resolution, and he may be of the opinion that the senate is not in temper for the discussion of that question, debate upon which generally excites more feeling than upon any other topic. There are, how-ever, some senators who think it should be given preference over all other topics.

Confer with the President. Senators Palmer and McPherson and other repeal senators had a long conference with the president today. When he returned to the senate chamber Mr. Palmer said he thought cloture would be undertaken soon. "It has come," he said, "to be a question whether the minthan the financial question. During the day Speaker Crisp was on the floor of the senate a great deal in conference with many of the senators, and Vice-President Stevenson descended from the chair and sat for a long time in conversation with Senator Voorhees There is no mistaking the fact that many of the silver democratic senators feel greatly relieved that the compromise amendment is not to be offered. They say that they surrendered all their convictions in order to promote harmony and secure a settlement of the question contrary to their best judgment, and they are more than willing to have the administration take the responsibility of not accepting the settle-Some Criticism.

Some of the repeal senators who have peretofore stood stanchly by the administration are also criticizing the course which has been pursued in the Which Is Likely to Break Out | compromise matter by the administration. This is especially true of the repeal members of the steering committee. There is no doubt that they were led to believe before the agreement was signed that the compromise would be approved by the administration, and that the president was at least willing that the bill as it was to be amended should be passed. They say that it was altogether favorable to the administration view. They do not take kindly to the fact that they should have been allowed to go so far in the matter and then be told that they have acted without warrant. Senator Gray, a strong repeal man, who has taken an especially active part in securing the agreement, is among those who are displeased with the change and he is quoted as criticising the administration sharply upon what is characterized as its vacillating

The senators opposed to unconditional repeal have been endeavoring for several days to bring about a compromise, and have not been deterred by the recent declaration that no compromise would be acceptable to the administration. BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 28 .-Late last night two more of the bodies burned in the Grand Trunk wreck were identified. The remains are those of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saxe of New York City. They were identified by a brother from that city. Three more bodies were identified this morning. The following is the list: Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Doland of Tilsonburg, Ont.; J. J. Brown of Strathroy, Ont. Two more bodies were recognized this afternoon as those of Marcus Reis of Kansas City, Mo., and J. M. Sloss of Chicago. There are eight bodies left in the morgue. Prosecutor Clark is the busiest man in Battle Creek. He means to leave no stone unturned in sifting the horrible affair to the bottom.

"I know that convictions are seldom obtained in these cases," he said this morning. "But I think the result will be different in this one. The coroner's inquest will come first. I have adjourned the criminal examination until after that is complete and shall myself conduct the examination of witnesses before Coroner Gillette. My reason' for wishing to have the inquest first is because a proceeding of that character admits of greater license in the matter of examining witnesses. I don't know whether Engineer Wooley and Conductor Scott have retained counsel or not, but presume they have. There is nothing connected with the entire tragedy that I shall not endeavor to bring out at the inquest. Neither will the higher officials be left out of the examination. I mean to find out whether the rush of business has induced them to employ incompetent subordinates, and if so, why they should not be held responsible for such acts. There are great many features of the affairs which will bear investigation. I cannot understand why a high building should have been placed inside the curve shutting off all view in each direction. We have an ordinance which prohibits the running of trains within the city limits at a speed greater than ten miles per hour. I think the speed made by the east-bound train must have been great from the time it left the depot, in order to strike with such terrible force. These conflicting stories of the engineer and ened out somehow. It is a matter in which the entire country is interested. and there must be no hesitancy in getting at the truth."

It was finally decided by Prosecutor Clark, before taking up the inquest, to adjourn the examination of Engineer Wooley and Conductor Scott on the criminal charges until Nov. 1. ,At 11 o'clock the absent juror put in an appearance and the inquest began. Train Dispatcher Seth Cornell was the first witness examined. His testimony is to the effect that he gave Conductor Scott Nichols and wait for No. 9. Five of the suspects arrested and taken to Jeffersonville two weeks ago were rightly suspected, but it was not through them that the heinous criminals were exposed. Last Saturday the grand jury orman who came to the Wrattan house early Tuesday morning and first discovered the terrible tragedy.

His arrest was caused through his own wife, who appeared before the grand jury and testified that Stone going to a dentist to have it extracted; that he did not return until a late hour, and then being covered with blood he asked for a change of clothes; that Stone maintained that the blood on his clothes was caused by the bleeding of his tooth. On inquiry it was found that no doctor or dentist had extracted a tooth from Stone. This was deemed strong evidence, especially when coming from the man's wife

As soon as Stone was brought to town the grand jury went to work to obtain a confession from him. At first he strenously denied everything, but being assured that clemency would be guaranteed to him if he made a confession, he at midnight yielded to their overtures. He told his story about as follows:

Knowing that Mrs. Wrattan kept a great deal of money about the house Grandiston Cosby, a notorious character in the county, planned a robbery. A gang of seven persons that formed a sort of society for robberies and general hellishness, was notified of his plan. Their names are Grandiston Cosby, Lon Williams, Martin Yarber of this city, | deserves it William Kays of Pike county, John W. White, Gipp Clark and James Stone. The plan was that Yarber and Clark

HISTORY OF THE CRIME.

In Account of the Murder of the Six

The following special from Washington appeared in The Sentinel Wednesday morning, Sept. 20: The most horrible crime ever committed in southern Indiana must be entered against Daviess county.

The instrument of death was either a cornknife or a hatchet or both. The question is, who did it? The impression prevails that some one well known by the family committed the horrible crime, and that when he was discovered by the older people he murdered even the three-year-old babe to destroy the evidence against him.

The tracks of three men were found, made while leaving the house through Little Ethel never recovered from the effects of her injuries. She laid unconscious for several days and then died, making the total murders six.

At one place all the men save one fled from the house. This man was drunk and insisted upon having a dance the committee on awards, came in late with one of the missionaries. He was finally squeiched by one of the officers. The trip occupied three hours and at its close Miss Hay, who has done missionary

"I have been through every part of New York and have seen life in its worst forms. This does not compare with what plained, and a dozen commissioners there is there. It is bad enough, howcalled out in unison. "Well. open the ever. It was an experience which the ladies who were with me will never forget and from which some of them will not recover for some time. Not that they were made ill, but the shock they our party. I have seen but one of the Georgia thought it came in conflict with | ladies today and on inquiry as to how the rest were I received the answer that few of them had slept at all last night. The information gained will enable the ladies to confuct the warfare against > the evils, against vice and intemperance." The tour of the W. C. T. U. women through the dark districts of Chicago was made known to Lady Henry Somerset, vice-president-at-large of the Weman's Christian temperance union. "I know nothing of the expedition up to this time," said she, "although I am not surprised in the least. While I cannot be certain in the matter, I take it that the women undertook the excursion acting on their own personal desire, and not any recommendation of the union. "Would you not know if the conventfon had taken any action on the sub-

"I certainly should, and yet I cannot state my opinion authoritatively, as I have not followed the meetings closely. I have often recommended that such work be taken up and have made a thorough investigation of this social purity problem myself. Such an investigation as this should be recognized by the union, but I am sure that it was not authorized by that body.'
